State and Local Tax

Caplin & Drysdale's State and Local Tax (SALT) practice group provides comprehensive tax advisory services and controversy representation to corporations and individuals with matters on a state and local level.

State tax matters can be challenging for clients to address, as they arise from any of fifty-plus state jurisdictions, plus a multitude of local taxing regimes. Regardless of the source, SALT issues are complex, operationally and financially important, and often overlooked.

The attorneys of our SALT group provide an integrated range of services, including counsel related to tax planning, assistance with state tax considerations related to mergers and acquisitions, and should the need arise, representation of clients in tax-related controversies. We can operate in all fifty states, and advise individuals and business clients of all sizes and in a wide range of industries, particularly private equity, manufacturing, retail, finance, real estate, and others.

Clients typically work directly and closely with Members, who provide both hands-on service and responsiveness with the judgment, knowledge, and strategic insight of senior practitioners. Similarly, we have longstanding working relationships with the personnel at many taxing agencies, and our reputation for professionalism, reasonableness, and candor is an asset to our clients. When it comes to state and local tax issues, we strive to be both skilled advocates and a trusted voice.
